Key Assessment Findings

Area Concentration Achievement Test (ACAT)

The ACAT was developed by the Program for Area Concentration Achievement Testing (PACAT) as an assessment tool for measuring student integration of the content components of particular disciplinary majors. NCSSS administers the Social Work Curriculum C version of this instrument, which covers four major content areas: human behavior and the social environment, social work practice, policy, and services, and research methods.

In the spring of 2016, 14 social work students took the exam. All 14 passed the exam and 2 passed with honors.
